Charlie Battery Launching Area
Construction Photographs - 1959

This set of three images document the Launching Area construction as it moves further along towards completion. Now there is a bit of conjecture here, however, in reading the land and the orientation of the structures, I am making my best guess what each photograph illustrates.

Image One is, I think, the forming of Bravo Section's revetment. Image Two either shows a finished revetment, or a berm, however, because of its size and placement in the landscape, I think it is a revetment. And Image Three is, to me, the construction of Bravo Section's Missile Hanger.

If anyone has any other thoughts or ideas about these images please present them.
